

RESOURCES

"We invite you to learn more about adult learning and "experiential education. "

WEB SITES

Association for Experiential Education
www.aee.org

Association for Challenge Course Technology
www.acctinfo.org

National Society for Experiential Education
www.nsee.org

Experience-based Training and Development Research Studies
www.tarrak.com/FREE/res.htm

Experienced Based Learning Systems Research Library
<http://www.learningfromexperience.com/research-library/>

ARTICLES AND PAPERS

Daniels, M.R. (1997). The ROPES course: applications for education and training. Journal of Public Administration Education, 3(2), 239-242.

Froiland, P. (1994, January). Action learning: Taming real problems in real time. Training, 31, 27-34.

Goldenberg, M.A., Nesbitt, G.M., Klenosky, D.B., O'Leary, J.T., & Templin, T.J. (1998). An introduction to ropes course and team challenge programs. National Intramural and Recreational Sports Association Journal, 2(2), 42-47.

Harris, K. & Barbee, R. (1999). An empirical evaluation of experience-based learning: A ropes course illustration. American Journal of Agricultural Economics, 81(5), 1311-1316.

Morris, E.K. (1987, Fall). Utilizing a ropes course in staff orientation. National Intramural and Recreational Sport Association Journal, 40-41.

Priest, S. (1998). Research update: Physical challenge and the development of trust through corporate adventure training. Journal of Experiential Education, 21(1), 31-34.

Steinfeld, C. (1997). Challenge courses can build strong teams. Training & Development, 51(4), 12-14.

BOOKS

Cain, J. & Jolliff, B. (1998). Teamwork & Teamplay: A guide to cooperative, challenge, and adventure activities. Dubuque, IA: Kendall/Hunt Publishing Company, 419 pages.

Kilpatrick, D.L. (1998). Evaluating training programs—The four levels. San Francisco, CA: Berrett Kohler, 275 pages.